

Easy
read

Aiming High for Disabled Children

Making things better for disabled children and their families

Children and young people's summary

More information

The Government has more plans to make things better for all children and young people – including you.

Find out more about Aiming High for Young People on this website www.dcsf.gov.uk/publications/tenyearyouthstrategy/

The Children's Plan on this website www.dcsf.gov.uk/childrensplan

Aiming High for Disabled Children on this website www.everychildmatters.gov.uk/ahdc

If you have anything you want to ask us or have any ideas, contact the Aiming High for Disabled Children team at ahdc.implementation@dcsf.gsi.gov.uk

If you would like this document in any other format, please email ahdc.implementation@dcsf.gsi.gov.uk

Introduction

The Government has a new plan to make things better for disabled children, young people and their families. It's called Aiming High for Disabled Children.

The Government wants to

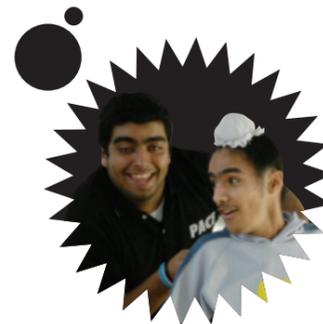

1. make sure that what you need is seen as the most important thing
2. help the people who work with you to support you in the way that is best for you
3. put more money into making the services you use better

Why are these changes happening?

Disabled children and their families told the Government they wanted

- more fun things for young people to do
- more support for young people as they grow up

What this means for you

The Government listened to what they were told. Over the next few years there will be a lot more money for services that you and your family need.

Some of the money will be used for

- more chances for you to do new things and make friends
- more support for you as you get older and leave school
- making childcare work better for you and your family

